On March 28, 2003, Nordstrom, Inc. issued a press release announcing the retirement of Joel Stinson, Chief Administrative Officer. A copy of this press release is as follows:

NORDSTROM CHIEF ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER RETIRES

SEATTLE - March 28, 2003 - Nordstrom, Inc. (NYSE: JWN) announced that Joel Stinson, Chief Administrative Officer (CAO), retired today. Stinson, 53, has been with the company for 27 years. Stinson cited his health and a desire to spend more time with his family as his reasons for retirement.

Stinson began working at Nordstrom in 1976 and spent the majority of his career leading the company's distribution and supply chain operations. As CAO, Stinson has been responsible for Nordstrom real estate, store planning, business information and technology, supply chain and operations. Most recently, he was responsible for supporting the rollout of the company's perpetual inventory system. The system, in part, provides salespeople better information at the point of sale to help improve the customer's shopping experience.

"Joel has consistently performed to the highest levels and exceeded expectations in every assignment he has undertaken," said Blake Nordstrom, president, Nordstrom, Inc. "He has been instrumental in helping the company move forward with technology and embrace perpetual inventory. As a key member of the executive team, much of the progress the company has made in the last two and a half years is attributable to his leadership."

Replacing Joel Stinson as CAO will be Dan Little. Little joined Nordstrom in July 2002 as vice president of supply chain strategy. He has more than 19 years experience in operations and supply chain management. Prior to joining Nordstrom, Little spent nine years at Colgate-Palmolive, most recently as the manufacturing general manager for personal care products in Europe. He also served as supply chain director for various European divisions and as a plant manager in Malaysia. Little began his career in operations and supply chain management with the Boeing Company.

Little received his master's in business administration from Harvard in 1991. He also holds a bachelor's of science, cum laude, in mechanical engineering from the University of Washington in 1984. Dan is a Northwest native and grew up in Longview, Washington.

"Joel and Dan have been working closely together for the past year and we welcome him to the team," said Nordstrom. "Dan will continue to execute the path we are on, helping to improve operations and the way we deliver and present merchandise to our customers."
